Playing By Their Own Rules

Last fall, the Minister of Canadian Heritage unveiled a long-awaited, and ultimately disappointing, cultural industries policy titled Creative Canada. It fell far short of expectations that taxes would finally be imposed on the Silicon Valley digital media giants to level the playing field with Canada's regulated broadcasting industry. Inexplicably, the federal government has decided to adopt the previous government's policy allowing Netflix to set its own rules, contribute little to our cultural ecosystem and pay no taxes.

In lieu of being regulated and taxed like all other Canadian services, Netflix pledged to spend $500 million in Canada over the next five years. Some filmmakers were excited by the prospect even though it wasn't clear what it actually meant. Would these funds be spent on Canadian productions or on American shows filmed in Canada? Would Netflix control the copyright or would Canadian producers own the intellectual property? Perhaps the $500 million is the amount Netflix saved in Canadian sales taxes?

The lack of information is no surprise as Netflix is notoriously secretive about its business. When the company appeared before the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission (CRTC) at the Let's Talk TV hearings in 2014, Netflix refused to provide the most basic of information, such as the number of Canadian subscribers and revenues.

In order to be granted a license by the CRTC, broadcasters are obligated to fulfil mandatory conditions including: committing a minimum percentage of their prime time schedule to Canadian content; spending a portion of their revenue on Canadian programs; providing closed-captioning and described video; ensuring diversity; and filing annual reports.

These rules and regulations, combined with levies on cable and satellite subscribers and funding from government, have helped build a vibrant Canadian-owned television industry. The Canada Media Fund distributes about $360 million annually to independent producers, guided by broad government policy objectives to ensure linguistic and regional diversity, and the creation of programs in the national interest such as children's, documentary and drama. It has helped fund several Knowledge Network commissions from BC independent producers such as the Emergency Room: Life + Death at VGH series, the Kate & Mim-Mim children's series, and the documentary feature Shut Up and Say Something.

Canada's cultural policy should not be dictated by the Internet giants of Silicon Valley. The Netflix deal is the Trojan horse already inside the gates – a precedent that could substantially diminish Canadian control of our cultural industry in the not-too-distant future. Fortunately, other jurisdictions are leading the way. The European Union recently unveiled plans to make digital service providers, such as Facebook and Google, pay tax in the countries where they do business. In March, Quebec's government announced that it would start collecting sales tax on digital services, including Netflix. There is hope after all.

Islands of Australia

THURSDAYS AT 8 PM, BEGINS MAY 31

Repeats Saturdays at 5 pm

It would take a lifetime to visit the more than 8,000 islands that ring the continent of Australia, so Martin Clunes, the star of Doc Martin, instead takes us to 16 of the best. On his island-hopping adventure he'll visit pristine palm-fringed paradises, stride along kelp-strewn beaches and dive into turquoise waters, coming face-to-face with sea turtles, whale sharks and other colourful creatures.

Travelling to islands near and far from Australia's coast, he'll experience ancient Aboriginal customs that are still very much alive, and discover a confluence of cultural influences that give each of the islands its unique vibe. He'll hear stories of mutineers, shipwrecks and the early convicts whose arrival changed the face of Australia forever. And he'll meet all sorts of inhabitants - from pearl divers and a modern-day Robinson Crusoe to tiger snakes and Tasmanian devils - while learning about the diversity and challenges of island life.

Arctic Secrets

TUESDAYS AT 7 PM, BEGINS MAY 8

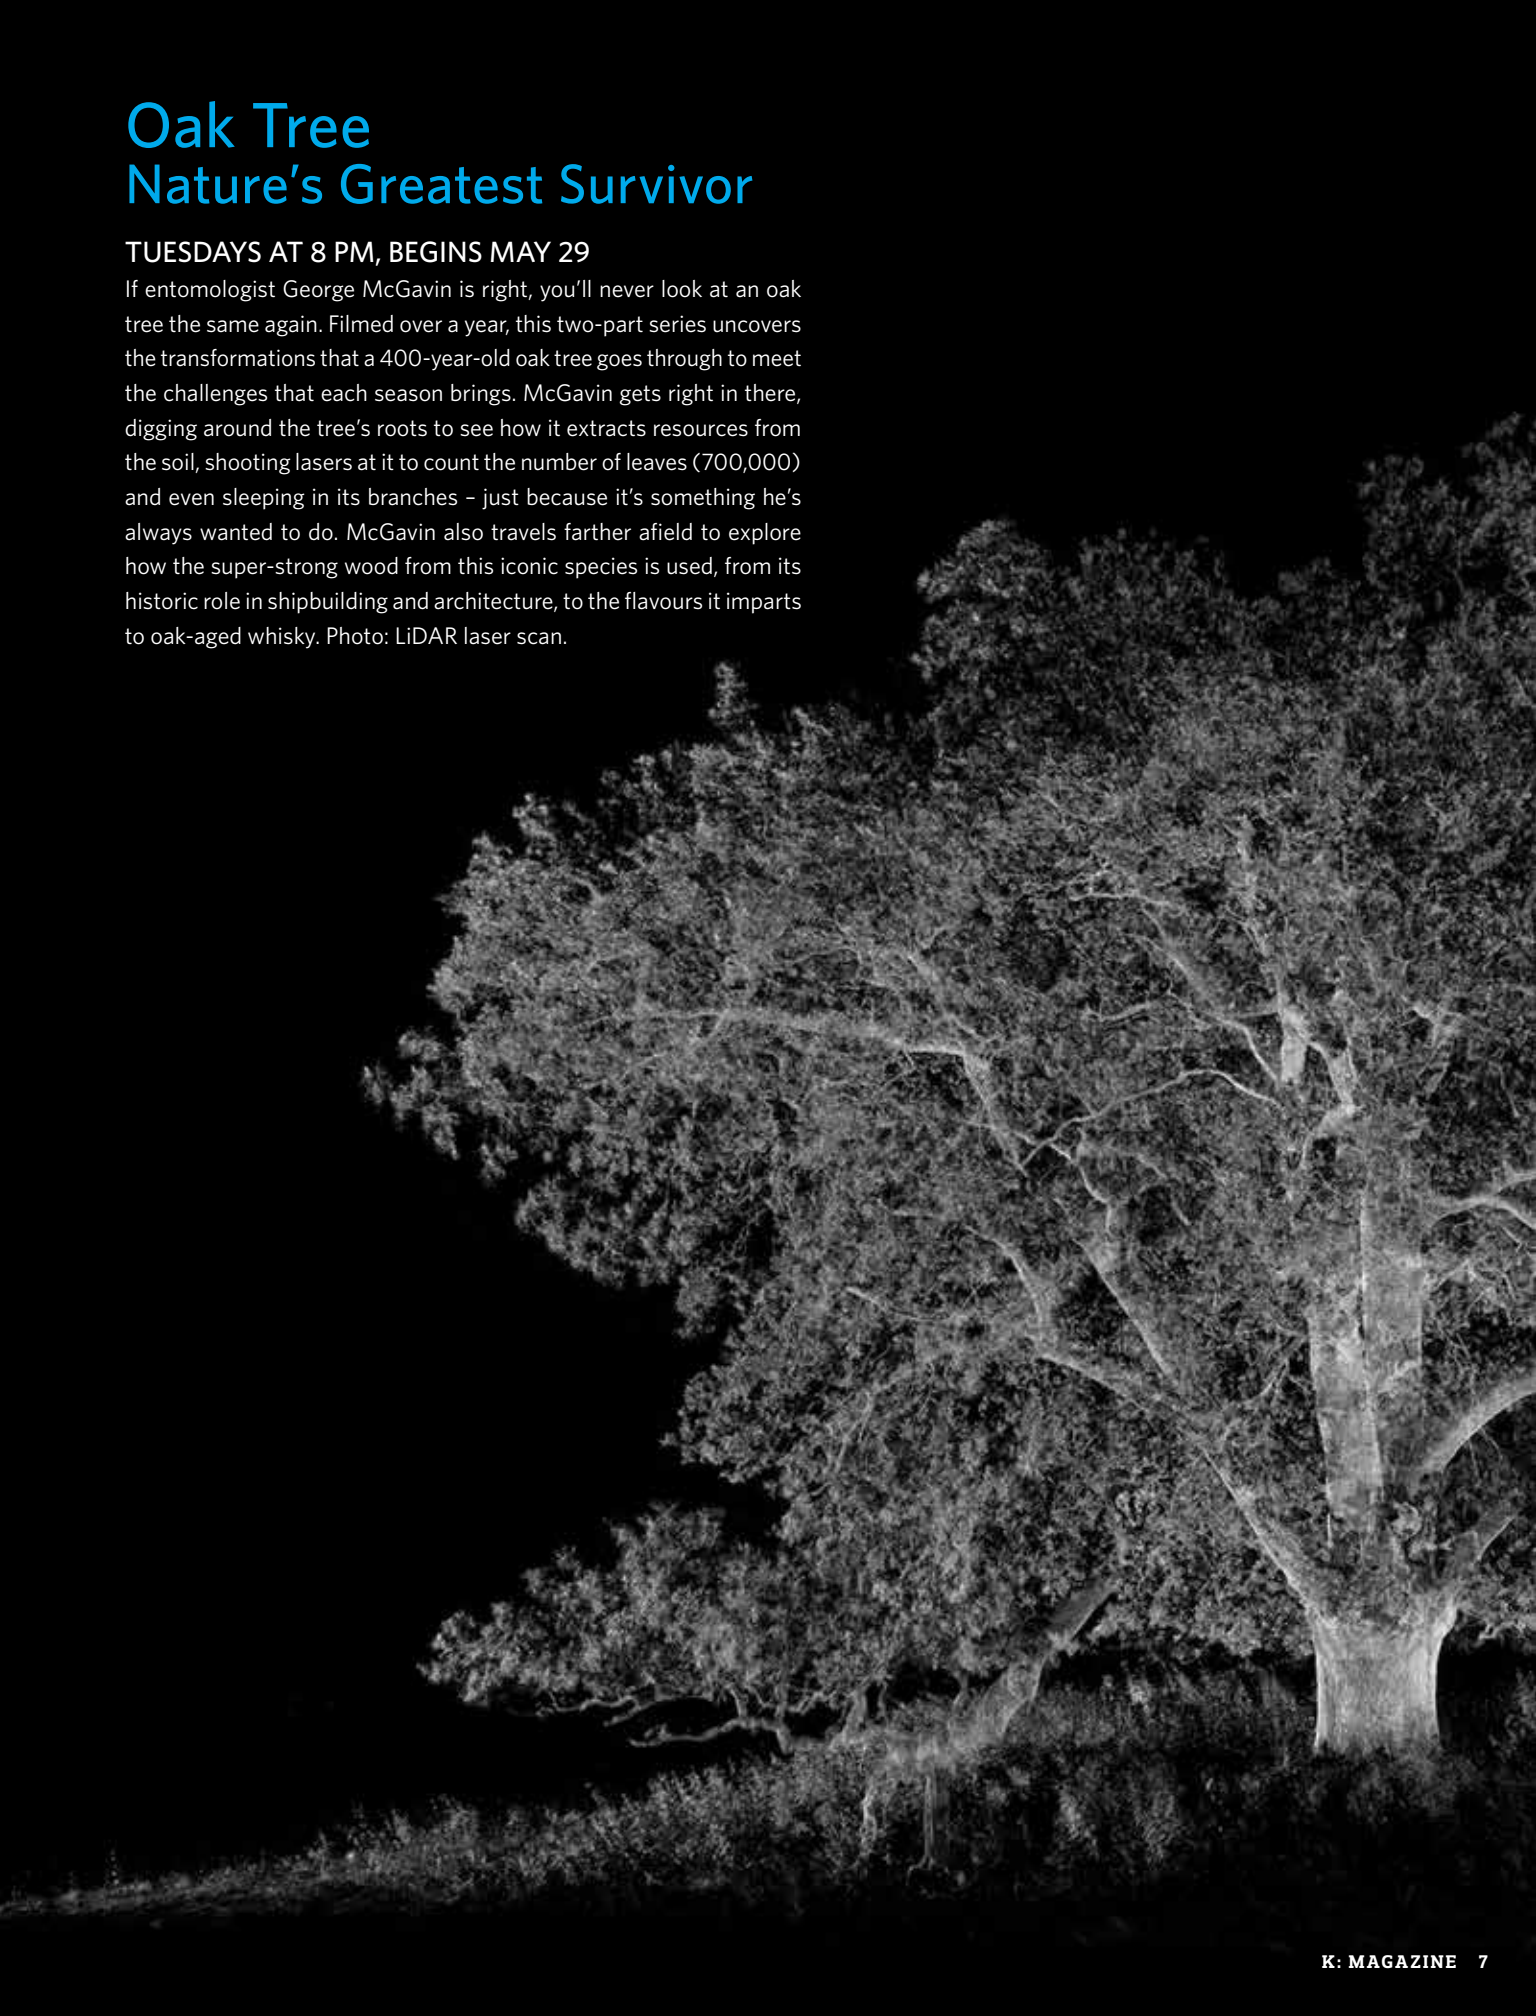

Repeats Wednesdays at 6 pm, 11 pm and Sundays at 1 pm

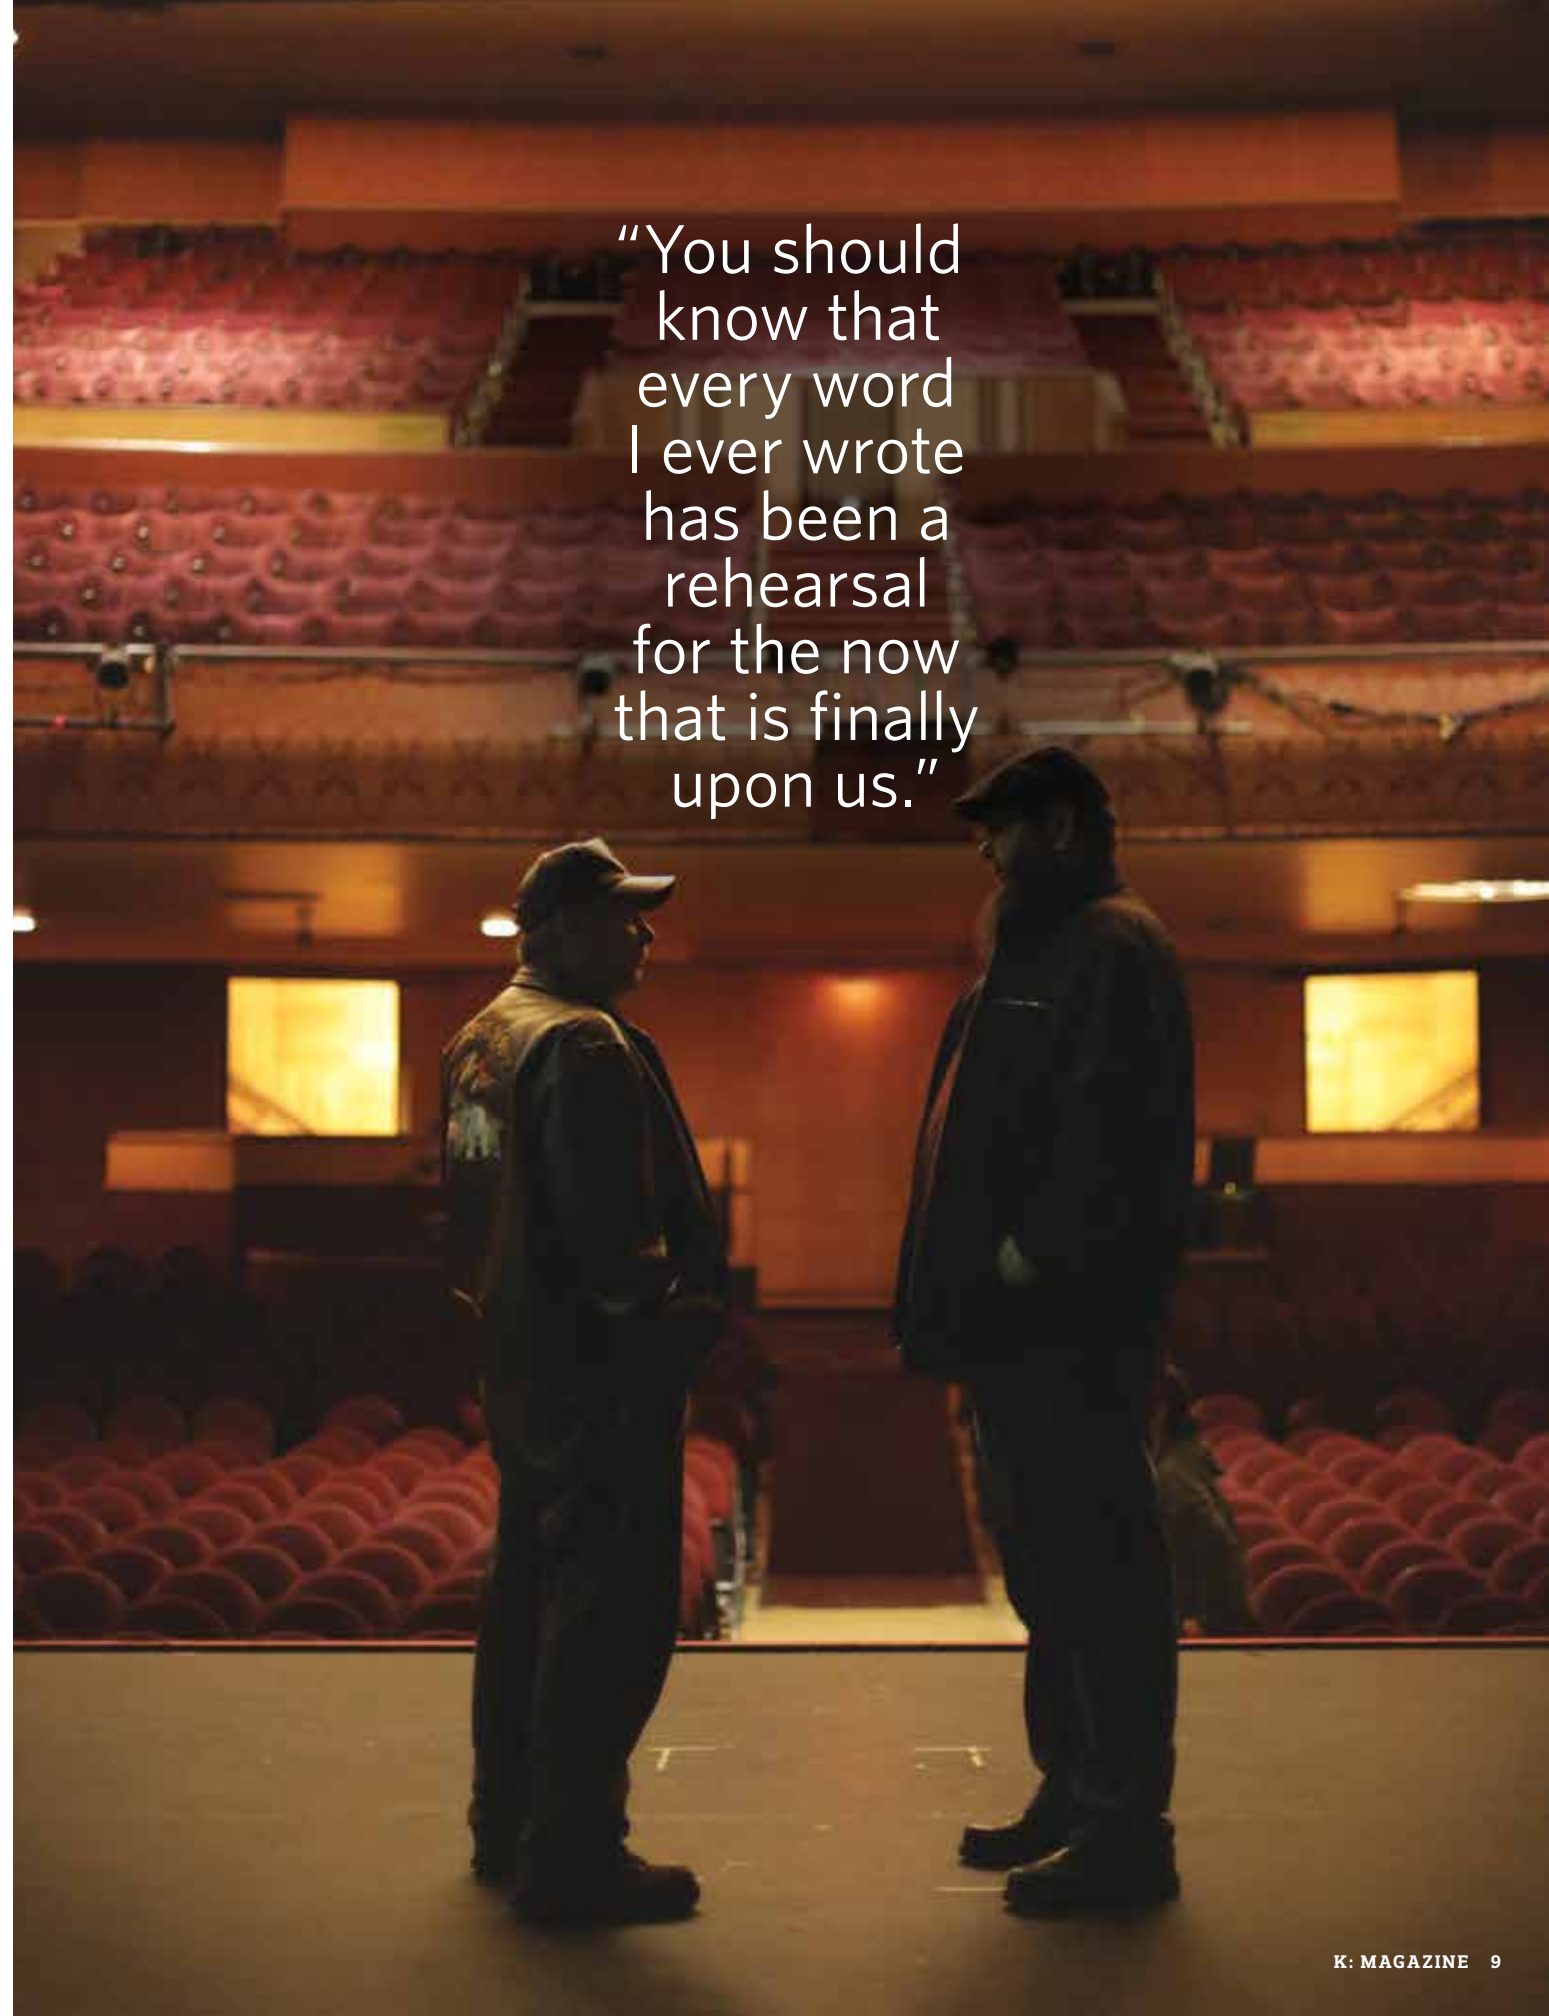

Take a journey to Canada's far north: a land of remote, mostly uninhabited wilderness, including the world's largest island to have a population of zero. Narrated by broadcaster Shelagh Rogers, this five-part series shows us icebergs calving and the vast frozen tundra, but there are also less familiar scenes, like a carpet of flowers blooming during the brief Arctic summer. Travelling through the seasons, we'll discover Inuit traditions and encounter animals such as musk oxen, caribou, bowhead whales and the iconic polar bear.

Oak Tree Nature's Greatest Survivor

TUESDAYS AT 8 PM, BEGINS MAY 29

If entomologist George McGavin is right, you'll never look at an oak tree the same again. Filmed over a year, this two-part series uncovers the transformations that a 400-year-old oak tree goes through to meet the challenges that each season brings. McGavin gets right in there, digging around the tree's roots to see how it extracts resources from the soil, shooting lasers at it to count the number of leaves (700,000) and even sleeping in its branches - just because it's something he's always wanted to do. McGavin also travels farther afield to explore how the super-strong wood from this iconic species is used, from its historic role in shipbuilding and architecture, to the flavours it imparts to oak-aged whisky. Shut Up and Say Something

TUESDAY, MAY 29 AT 9 PM

Repeats at midnight

Few spoken word poets gain widespread fame. Shane Koyczan is one of the few, awing the world with his breathtaking performance at the Vancouver 2010 Opening Ceremony, bringing audiences to their feet at TED Talks and on tour, and going viral with his powerful anti-bullying poem “To This Day”. His poetry is visceral and honest; rhythmic high-speed verse that mines the dark matter found deep in the soul and lays bare a tender humanity. Yet as exposed as he is on the stage, Shane finds it hard to truly connect with other people – the outcome of a troubled family life, severe bullying and depression: experiences that he draws upon again and again in his work.

Shut Up and Say Something follows the BC-based artist on a personal journey as he attempts to forge a relationship with the father who abandoned him long ago. The experience is both painful and cathartic, and Shane deals with the difficult emotions in the only way he knows – with his words.

The Apology

TUESDAY, MAY 1 AT 9 PM

Repeats at midnight

If an apology comes too late, does it have any meaning? This harrowing, moving documentary follows the personal journeys of three elderly survivors who were snatched from their homes and forced into being "comfort women" – a euphemism for sexual slaves – by the Japanese army during WWII. Time may be running out, but after years of suffering in silence and shame – not even telling their families about their devastating experiences – they are standing up and demanding that the truth be told, so that this horrific chapter of history will never be forgotten.

The Only Son

TUESDAY, MAY 8 AT 9 PM

Repeats at midnight

Pema's parents want him to marry a girl from home and carry on the traditional Tibetan ways. But Pema, who along with all but one of his sisters was sent to a Kathmandu orphanage when his parents couldn't care for them, wants to study abroad and live a modern life. The pressure is enormous. Pema enlists the help of his siblings, and together they make the trek through the magnificent peaks of the Himalayas to their native village. The local bride is waiting, but will Pema obey his parents?

The 50 Year Argument

TUESDAY, MAY 15 AT 9 PM

Repeats at midnight

Confrontation and intelligent argument are in the DNA of The New York Review of Books, the venerable literary publication that has been at the forefront of political and cultural debate for more than 50 years, publishing pieces by such leading thinkers as Norman Mailer, Gore Vidal, Susan Sontag and Joan Didion. Co-directed by Martin Scorsese, this paean to the magazine and its esteemed co-founding editor, Robert B. Silvers, who passed away in 2017 after the film was made, features archival footage, interviews and writers reading from their Review essays.

Tim's Vermeer

TUESDAY, MAY 22 AT 9 PM

Repeats at midnight

It's not often that you hear "I could paint that" when it comes to the magnificent works of the Dutch Masters. That didn't stop inventor Tim Jenison, who, despite having no artistic training, became obsessed with recreating one of Johannes Vermeer's masterpieces. There have long been theories that Vermeer used mirrors and lenses to create his luminous, eerily realistic paintings; Jenison puts those theories to the test in this film by magic duo Penn & Teller. His shocking results could change the history of art forever.

ćəsnaʔəm the city before the city

TUESDAY, JUNE 19 AT 9 PM

Repeats at midnight

For thousands of years before Vancouver rose on the shores of the Salish Sea, the Musqueam people thrived on the bounty of the land, the river and the ocean. In this film by Elle-Máíjá Tailfeathers, members of the Musqueam First Nation share their deeply rooted knowledge of their vast ancestral territory, which was never ceded by treaty, and create an evocative portrait of the region before it was paved with concrete and glass towers. The film also documents a watershed moment in 2012, when the Musqueam and their supporters halted construction of a condo development at the site of an ancient village known as ćəsnaʔəm.

Revelstoke A Kiss in the Wind

TUESDAY, JUNE 5 AT 9 PM

Repeats at midnight

Like so many immigrants, Angelo Conte came to Canada to find work. But he would never return home to Italy; in October 1915 he was killed while working on the CPR's Connaught Tunnel, which burrows under Roger's Pass in BC. His family never knew what happened to him. A century later, the discovery of Angelo's love letters to his wife, Anna, leads his great-grandson, filmmaker Nicola Moruzzi, to Revelstoke in search of his lost story.

Natural Disorder

TUESDAY, JUNE 12 AT 9 PM

Repeats at midnight

What does "normal" mean? 24-year-old journalist and comedian Jacob Nossell, who has cerebral palsy, wants to know where he fits in the definition. Whip-smart but trapped in an uncooperative body, he stages an ambitious play at Copenhagen's Royal Theatre that challenges the audience's notions of living with a disability. The film follows Jacob's struggle for acceptance while asking if the future includes room for people like him.

Much Too Young

TUESDAY, JUNE 26 AT 9 PM

Repeats at midnight

Kathryn was just 21 when her mom was diagnosed with early onset Alzheimer's. Her life is now divided between caring for her mother and trying to follow her own youthful ambitions. With about 16,000 Canadians under the age of 65 living with the disease, Kathryn isn't the only one faced with the unexpected role reversal of caring for an ailing parent. This unflinching documentary follows young people from four families - some of them still teenagers - struggling with the challenges of becoming a caregiver just when they should be striking out on their own.

Call the Midwife

FRIDAYS AT 8 PM, BEGINS MAY 11

Repeats at midnight

The hit British drama about life, love and labour in 1950s East London has arrived on Knowledge! Based on the bestselling memoirs by Jennifer Worth, the series follows the adventures of Jenny Lee (Jessica Raine), a fresh-faced and somewhat naive young nurse working as part of a team of midwives based at Nonnatus House, a convent in one of London's poorest neighbourhoods.

Nothing could fully prepare Jenny for the life that awaits her in Poplar, where families of eight to ten children are common and women give birth in sometimes harrowing circumstances. As Jenny and the other midwives minister to the expectant mothers, among them a woman on her 25th pregnancy and a 15-year-old prostitute, they'll have to use all their training, common sense and compassion to help their patients, while navigating unexpected bumps in their own personal lives.

FINAL SEASON

Whitechapel

SUNDAYS AT 10 PM, BEGINS MAY 27

Repeats at 2 am

A series of macabre murders are plaguing London's East End, and it's up to detectives Chandler (Rupert Penry-Jones) and Miles (Phil Davis), along with historical researcher Ed Buchan (Steve Pemberton), to find out who - or what - is behind them. In the final season of Whitechapel, they'll face their deepest fears as they investigate a deadly witch hunt, flayed bodies and the possibility of cannibalistic killers prowling the city's sewers. Meanwhile, the station itself is troubled by unexplained phenomena, including mysterious footsteps, creeping mould and flickering lights. Could it be haunted? The forces of evil seem to be gathering strength, and when a case gets dangerously personal for Chandler, he's forced to take desperate measures.

NEW SEASON

Vera

FRIDAYS AT 9 PM, BEGINS JUNE 8

Repeats at 1 am

Not much gets past Vera. Obsessive and driven, the stalwart detective is sharper than her somewhat careless appearance suggests - as perpetrators have learned in the previous six seasons. Played by the inimitable Brenda Blethyn, Vera and her team once again take on a series of puzzling cases, including a wildlife ranger's mysterious end on a remote island, a drug addict found face-down in a river, a promising university student who falls to his death and a missing 18-year-old discovered buried on the moors. The stunning landscapes of Northumberland continue to be a key part of the series, with the unspoiled natural beauty acting as counterpoint to the devastation brought about by jealousy, betrayal and deceit.

The Man Who Shot Tutankhamun

MONDAY, JUNE 4 AT 8 PM

Repeats Sunday at 5 pm

Howard Carter gained fame as the man who discovered King Tutankhamun's tomb, but it was photographer Harry Burton who introduced its magnificent treasures to the world. Setting up his darkroom in the depths of an ancient tomb, Burton managed to document the excavation and its findings in beautiful detail despite the challenging heat and dust. Margaret Mountford travels to the Valley of the Kings to explore the spectacular locations where Burton worked, and discovers how he pushed the boundaries of photographic art to create his extraordinary images. Photo: Howard Carter brushes the dust off the second coffin in Tutankhamun's tomb, October 1925, photographed by Harry Burton.

NEW SEASON

Fake or Fortune?

MONDAYS AT 9 PM, BEGINS MAY 21

Repeats at midnight

Could a striking landscape really be a lost masterpiece by John Constable? Did Tom Roberts, one of Australia's most important artists, paint a picture bought for a pittance (relatively speaking) at an online art auction? And has Gauguin's first pencil sketch for one of the most expensive paintings ever sold turned up in a quiet suburb of Manchester? Art sleuths Philip Mould and Fiona Bruce team up to discover who's behind these perplexing works of art. If they're genuine, they could be worth millions. If frauds, at least there's a good story to tell!

The Real Doctor Zhivago

MONDAY, JUNE 11 AT 9 PM

Repeats at midnight

Set against the turbulent backdrop of Russia in the early 20th century, Doctor Zhivago is one of the world's great love stories. But it may also have been the bravest book ever written. Author Boris Pasternak faced penury, public denunciation and even death while writing it under Stalin's rule, yet his deep love for Russia drove him on. Stephen Smith traces the revolutionary roots of the book that would become a beloved Oscar-winning film, and whose own story has more twists and intrigue than many a Hollywood blockbuster.

The Secret Life of Chaos

TUESDAY, MAY 1 AT 8 PM

The movie Jurassic Park may have introduced chaos theory to the masses, but the notion of dinosaurs running amok didn't quite do it justice. Unpredictability, it seems, is hardwired into our universe, yet nature has a way of organizing itself into exquisite order and pattern. Theoretical physicist Jim Al-Khalili takes us through mind-bending scientific discoveries, including the famous Mandelbrot set (detail shown here), and ponders whether chaos theory holds the answer to the ultimate question – how did we come to be?

Gravity and Me The Force That Shapes Our Lives

TUESDAYS AT 8 PM, BEGINS MAY 8

What if you could weigh a little bit less, or slow down how fast you age? As professor Jim Al-Khalili demonstrates in this two-part series, we can thank gravity for these effects, however minute they might be. Using Einstein's discoveries, Jim investigates the link between gravity and time with the help of a smartphone app, and takes us to the place in Britain where, according to the laws of physics, we weigh the least. Looking into the latest scientific breakthroughs, he learns that there are still many mysteries to uncover about gravity's strange powers.

Seiji Ozawa at the Matsumoto Festival

SUNDAY, MAY 27 AT 3 PM

Seiji Ozawa is, quite simply, one of the most brilliant conductors of our time, known for his energetic conducting style as well as his famous shock of now-grey hair. Both are on splendid display in this concert held in Matsumoto, Japan, part of an annual festival that Ozawa co-founded in 1992 in memory of the great Japanese cellist and conductor Hideo Saito. Ozawa, 80 years old at the time of the concert, shows no signs of slowing down as he leads the Saito Kinen Orchestra in a passionate performance of Beethoven's Symphony No. 2 and No. 7.

Gravity Check
Want to find out how gravity affects how fast you age? There's an app for that! Developed by professor Jim Al-Khalili for his Gravity and Me series (Tuesday at 8 pm), with the help of computer science students at Surrey University, the Time Warper app uses your smartphone's GPS sensors to reveal how your location and speed impacts the passage of time. In the series, Jim discovers that the app isn't working right because of a mistake in his calculations. But Jim insisted on leaving the mishap in the program, as a real-life example of scientific trial and error.

Royal Insight

In honour of a certain royal wedding, we are delighted to bring you an encore presentation of Queen Victoria's Letters: A Monarch Unveiled (Wednesday at 9 pm). Victoria was known to be a prolific diarist, sometimes writing up to 2,500 words a day. Although many of her journals and letters were edited or destroyed after her death, enough remain to give us insight into her tempestuous nature and complicated relationships. Discover why her marriage to Prince Albert was far from idyllic - it seems he was a bit of a control freak - and how her mother was not as cold to her as is commonly believed.

We Are More

and some say what defines us is something as simple as please and thank you and as for you're welcome well we say that too but we are more than genteel or civilized we are an idea in the process of being realized we are young we are cultures strung together then woven into a tapestry and the design is what makes us more than the sum totals of our history we are an experiment going right for a change

Excerpt from Shane Koyczan's poem for the Vancouver 2010 Opening Ceremony

Valiant Vera
This week's season premiere of Vera (Friday at 9 pm) was filmed on one of the Farne Islands off the coast of Northumberland, famous for their puffins and seals, as well as the story of Grace Darling's daring sea rescue in 1838. Grace, who was 22 at the time, helped her lighthouse-keeper father pull nine sailors from the wreckage of a ship that foundered in foul weather. Says star Brenda Blethyn in an ITV interview, "Vera probably would have attempted that. And likely would have perished. But she would have had a go!"

Remembering a Great Friend of Knowledge

We, along with so many people, were heartbroken to hear that one of Canada's finest storytellers, Arthur Black, passed away on February 21. Always a friend of public broadcasting, Arthur became one of Knowledge's on-air campaign hosts in 2014, entertaining us all with his warm and witty tales. He also hosted several of our Midsomer Murders events on Vancouver Island, as well as his beloved Salt Spring Island. We are so grateful to have had Arthur as a colleague, friend and donor.

Knowledge Original Premieres at Hot Docs
 Grant Baldwin and Jen Rustemeyer are celebrating the Hot Docs premiere of their new documentary, This Mountain Life, which follows a mother and daughter - both lifelong adventurers - on a six-month, self-supported journey through BC's remote mountain wilderness. The film, commissioned by Knowledge, is the latest from the talented Vancouver couple, who also brought us Just Eat It and The Clean Bin Project. A riveting examination of human passion, This Mountain Life will air on Knowledge later this year.

Ruff-Ruff, Tweet and Dave

NEW EPISODES WEEKDAYS AT 1 PM

These three best pals are back with a brand-new bunch of adventures. Ruff-Ruff, an energetic pup, Tweet, a giggly chick, and Dave, a quirky blue panda, make new friends this season, including a cheeky monkey who loves to show them around his jungle home. Hammy the Hamster is back, too, and his hat full of questions will have young viewers leaping up to shout the answers first.

Wild Kratts

NEW EPISODES THURSDAYS AT 5:30 PM

Activate creature power! The superhero brothers are set to tackle four new missions, but first they have to find the missing chips that power their suits in Cheeks the Hamster (May 3). They'll also try to fit in with the herd in Wild Ponies (May 10), discover the differences between African and Asian elephants in Elephant Brains (May 17) and learn how sloth bears literally Hoover their food in Sloth Bear Suction (May 24).

New Adventures on Knowledge Kids

Tee and Mo

WEEKDAYS AT 12:53 PM

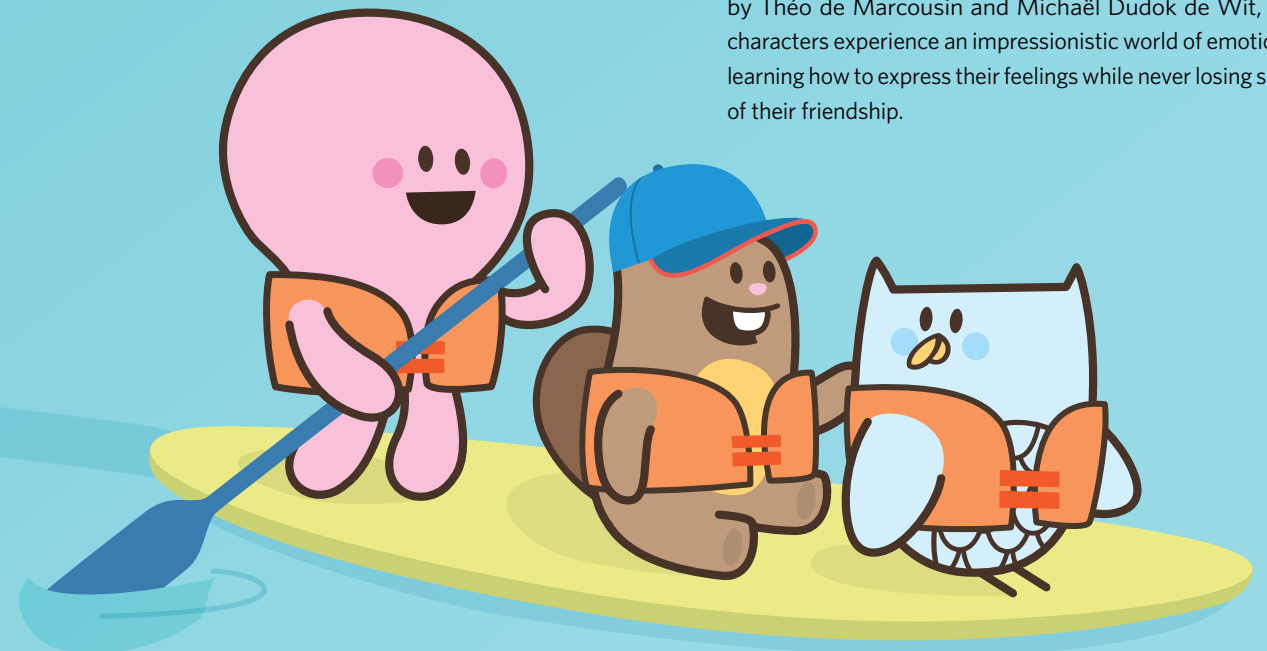

The apple – or in this case, the monkey – doesn't fall far from the tree. Mo is the mother of three-year-old Tee, and the two of them are alike in so many ways – they both hate bananas (what are the odds!) and they both love having fun, from the morning fruit mash-up to the last "try to make me laugh with your weirdest face" at bedtime. Developed with preschoolers in mind, this new series provides a charming take on building relationships through imaginative play.

Ella, Oscar and Hoo

WEEKDAYS AT 1:30 PM

A child meets a cloud... and friendship blossoms into poetry! Oscar, a young boy, and Hoo, his cloud friend, along with Ella, their young neighbour, explore the joys of everyday life and weather the small storms of childhood emotions in this beautifully animated series. Based on the bestselling books by Théo de Marcousin and Michaël Dudok de Wit, the characters experience an impressionistic world of emotions, learning how to express their feelings while never losing sight of their friendship.

It's All in the Eye Tamara Roberts

As a professional portrait photographer, Tamara Roberts knows that taking a good photo isn't about the equipment you use - whether a smartphone or the top Hasselblad on the market. The skill is in the eye. And when it comes to taking a good portrait, it's what you see in the person, too. "You have to get to know them, to talk to them and make sure they're relaxed. It's a discovery every time, and that's what makes my job so interesting," she says. Tamara's love of photography is connected in many ways to her passion for lifelong learning. "I just have a natural inquisitiveness about the world - everything fascinates me."

Tamara has discovered that her desire to learn about the world is fulfilled, at least in part, by Knowledge. It was her mother who first introduced Tamara to the station, and she quickly came to love it. "There are so many interesting shows on art and people and nature - just about any subject you can imagine." Tamara soon became a Partner, knowing that she was getting something of real value from her donation. "I think of Knowledge as a stunning visual library," she explains. "Every time you turn it on you discover something new, presented in such a beautiful way."
